Celebrating 44 Years of Camelot...Where Heroes are Born

Merlin's Muse

The labyrinth has been calling to me lately. My morning walks often lead me there, and I find myself lingering a little longer each day. To me, it is both a sacred and magical place—a space for quiet reflection and renewal.

For thousands of years, labyrinths have been used as symbols, spiritual tools, and places of contemplation. Across cultures and throughout history, their purpose has evolved, but they have always represented one enduring truth: life is a journey, not simply a destination.

My own journey brought me to Camelot in August of 2002. Never in a million years could I have imagined how profoundly this place would change my life. It has enriched me beyond measure. As I reflect on where I have been, the lives I have been privileged to touch, and the good we have released into the world together, I am filled with gratitude. Those reflections remind me that a life dedicated to serving others is a life filled with purpose and meaning.

My wish for each of you—our Camelot family—is that you take a moment to reflect on your own journey and the personal connection you have with Camelot. What brought you here? How has this place touched your life? What memories will you carry with you?

If you feel inspired, I would love to hear your story. Please send me an email and share your Camelot journey. I promise your words will fill my heart beyond measure.
